Baby Boy Becomes Pride Of Five Generations

Lynn Warden Cunningham, one month and two days old Sunday, is too young to realize the full significance of being the fifth living generation, but to his doting grandmothers he is an important addition to the family album.

Born April 14, 1943, in Salt Lake City, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cunningham of San Francisco, he is the fifth of the five generations, exactly 20 years apart.

The tiny boy's grandmother is Mrs. Howell Davis, and his great-grandmother, Mrs. Hilda B. Loader, both of Salt Lake City. The great-great-grand... are Mrs. Han... of ag...

party landed at New Orleans and came directly to Utah, arriving at Charleston, December 24, 1864.

William grew to manhood on his father's farm. He later engaged in the dairy business and was successful in both undertakings.

It was after his marriage that William labored as a missionary in Tennessee, from May, 1885 to November, 1887. He was Superintendent of the Sunday School fo thirteen years and for twenty-five years a officer in the Sunday School. He was member of the High Council for ten years and on Feb. 10, 1901 was set apart as Bishop of the Charleston Ward. He was also active in civic work as a County Commissioner for two years, trustee of the Charleston School Board, President of the canal company, road supervisor, stockholder and director of the Charleston Co-op. He was, for the last twenty-six years of his life, Patriarch of the Wasatch Stake.

Annie Daybell held numerous positions in the church, working in the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association, Relief Society, and serving as President of the Pi mary Association in the Charleston Wa In her later years she was called on to take care of the dead, which she did for nineteen years. There were no morticians in the valley then, and she helped dress and lay away sixty-seven people. She was a temple worker all her life.

They were the parents of 11 children: John William, Mary Ann, James Finity, Phebe E., Joseph Franklin, Myrtle, Violet B., Lula, Ernest, Warren.
